▶ About MADA Center

Center for Humanities Studies and Research - MADA

is a youth organization that contributes in achieving democratic transition on scientific and social participatory basis.

The Center was founded in 1998 as a Student Cultural and Intellectual Club in Ben Msik Faculty of Letters and Humanities, Hassan II University. In 2003, MADA was registered as an association under the Moroccan Association Act.

The center is composed of a General Assembly of 45 members, an Administrative Council, and an Executive Board of 5 members. Graduate students of various disciplines, researchers, and university lecturers—averagely aged below 30—represent the center's valuable assets.

The center consists of 4 leading teams:

Civic Forum:

Partnering with the Casablanca Academy of Education and a number of Moroccan universities, the Civil Forum is committed to promoting civic values and democratic initiatives and choices via training workshops and other activities. It also aims at establishing dialogue between political parties, regardless of its various ideological backgrounds. With its assets and expertise, the Civil Forum addresses vital public sectors and issues, especially education, health, corruption, and the democratization of the media arena—sectors that both represent Morocco's weaknesses and challenges. It appeals to the youth, who constitute the core of the center.

'RIHANAT'—the journal:

In 2006, the center launched its first edition of 'RIHANAT,' a quarterly cultural journal devoted to allowing the youth to demonstrate and unleash their potential to write, edit, and publish high-quality critical articles. The journal also serves as the center's archive to document the reported activities, seminars, research studies, intellectual events as well as qualitative interviews on the topic of democratic transition—both inside and outside Morocco.

Capacity Building:

Within the scope of the center's objectives, a training team—namely 'Capacity Building'—was formed in 2008 in partnership with International Forum for Islamic Dialogue in an endeavor to allow the youth to invest in their potential and to promote success and other universal values.

Maghreb Forum:

In 2009, MADA succeeded in organizing its first Maghreb Forum with the contribution of highly accredited professors, renowned politicians, and other keynote speakers from the 5 Maghreb countries. The Forum is devoted, under the supervision of a Board of Trustees representing the 5 countries, to achieving "communication between peoples of the Maghreb" and "keeping up with the Maghreb reforms," as was suggested in the title of the Forum.

Civil Society Academy:

Civil Society Academy —effective since 2015—is a two-level platform operating under the center. The first level provides training to young leaders and youth-led civil society organizations in the Arab World. The second level addresses founders of civil society organizations for the exchange of experiences, opportunities, and consultations on democracy issues.

The forenamed teams co-operate within an integrative framework to achieve the center's global goals. They endeavor, under the supervision of the Executive Board, to promote civic awareness, citizenship values, and reform opportunities.

is a youth organization that contributes in achieving democratic transition on scientific and social participatory basis.

The Center for Humanities Studies and Research - MADA aims at:

- Making theoretical and field research concerning democracy issues and submitting recommendations to the official institutions.
- Launching initiatives to strengthen the practice and the culture of democracy in the Arab region.
- Contributing to positive engagement in the issues on the workshops of the democratic reform in Morocco.
- Supporting the conscious engagement of youth in public issues.
- Reinforcing the awareness of diversity and consolidating Moroccan social integration.
